Jesse Topper comments on Health Bill

While watching the United States House of Representatives debate the overhaul of the American health care system, I was struck by how many Democrats used the word “historic” to describe this bill. As though simply being historic is enough to make legislation acceptable! There have been many historic moments in America, but not all of them have been good. This health care bill is extremely flawed and will have negative ramifications for generations to come. It is the greatest intrusion of government that many of us have seen, or ever will see, in our lifetime! So how did we get here? It’s quite simple; elections have consequences.

Over the past several years, I’ve heard the statement that the two political parties are virtually the same and that it doesn’t really matter who wins an election because “they’re all corrupt”. However, that is not the case. I saw many brave and principled men and women take to the floor of the House to fight this bill on behalf of their constituents, but there weren’t enough of them to stop it from passing. If you have family, friends, or neighbors who have never voted, it’s time to point out how vital it is to be engaged in our political process at the local, state, and national levels. As your representative to the Republican State Committee, I will continue to challenge our party to recruit strong, principled candidates who will serve our interests above their own and fight against the liberal approach of massive government expansion! Thank you for your continued support!
